

INDIANA UNIVERSITY

THE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL

Please help spread the word about Indiana University's campus visit program, Getting You into IU – Spring 2015. If you know of individuals who would be interested and could benefit from this opportunity, share the following announcement and remind them of the upcoming deadlines.

GETTING YOU INTO IU SPRING 2015

The Indiana University Graduate School will host a spring Getting You into IU, a Bloomington campus visit program for prospective underrepresented and minority students on April 9-12, 2015. This is an all-expense paid trip for highly qualified future PhD and MFA applicants to visit Indiana University Bloomington and the First Nations Education and Cultural Center (FNECC) of Indiana University. Participants will learn more about IU's Ph.D. and M.F.A. programs, research opportunities and funding options and meet with faculty and current graduate students. As an added bonus, program participants are invited to attend the Symposium on Resistance and Resilience and join the 3rd Annual Community Wellness Dance hosted by the FNECC. All dance categories welcome, so bring your regalia. See attached flyer.

GU2IU spring 2015 program participants must:

1. Be U.S. citizens or permanent residents.
2. Be juniors, seniors, master's level students in good academic standing; or, degreed professionals interested in pursuing a PhD or MFA at Indiana University Bloomington.
3. Complete a GU2IU spring 2015 application form requesting demographic information, educational interests, non-official transcripts and a personal essay.

Preference will be for faculty nominated participants in STIM (sciences, technology, informatics and mathematics) disciplines and the social sciences.
